Endgame Dungeons for Order of Eventide

Introduction

Now that the Master Behemoths have been slain, their relinquished arcane power has begun to pool in the deepest halls of Valeria's ancient sites. The Horde, Forsaken, and wandering Behemoths that fled into these depths are gorging themselves on this loose power, twisting the dungeons into nightmarish echoes where reality frays and monsters grow stronger with every passing night. Heroes who enter the Trials of the Deep are treading where evil has gone to hide and feed, and where foes drink deeply of residual arcane might.

Endgame Dungeons

In Trials of the Deep, heroes will return to each region to confront deadlier enemies who rise to contest the party's power level. In the farthest reaches of every dungeon, heroes can call on Moonwell Faeries to permanently improve their equipment.

Before finding a dungeon, decide if it's a 'Trials of the Deep' dungeon or a standard dungeon. When finding a Trials of the Deep dungeon, indicate it on the dungeon sheet and make the following changes:

- All enemies now activate their blunder abilities when rolling a 1 or 2.
- Scale enemy Level and Health according to the party's highest-level hero using the chart below.
- The dungeon's last revealed room houses a Moonwell Faerie, which grants Stardust that heroes can use to permanently improve a weapon, shield, Lunite Shard, or their own Surge Charge capacity.

Like normal dungeons, Trials of the Deep dungeons permanently close when heroes sleep at the inn.

Increased Enemy Level & Health

Enemy level and health is increased throughout the duration of the Trials of the Deep dungeon. Level and health increase is determined when finding the dungeon. If heroes level up and return to a dungeon, enemy stats do not change.

Final Room

As you fill out the dungeon sheet, keep track of how many more rooms can fit in the dungeon. The last room you are able to draw is considered the Final Room, and houses a Moonwell Faerie instead of the room's normal activities (combat, peril, altar, etc).

The Final Room has a secret exit that leads back to the dungeon entrance. No backtracking is needed.

DETERMINING THE FINAL ROOM

If a room exit is two or more squares from the dungeon edge, it leads to an unexplored room. If a room exit is only one square from the edge of a room or dungeon, it is a dead end.

When revealing the last unexplored room, it is considered the final room (provided it doesn't lead to any more unexplored rooms). Indicate this room with an F on the dungeon sheet.

Moonwell Faeries & Stardust

Deep in the recesses of the earth, odd flowers shine in the oppressive darkness. Tiny faeries tend these Moonwell flowers, gathering and keeping their pollen. The faeries may choose to share their treasures with brave heroes, bestowing on them the mystical Moonwell flower pollen commonly called Stardust.

The Final Room of each Trials of the Deep dungeon houses Moonwell Faeries. Interacting with the Moonwell Faeries grants each hero d2 Stardust (each hero rolls separately). Heroes may consume 1 Stardust outside of battle or in Kara's Vale to do one of the following:

- Permanently increase a weapon's Attack by 1 by consuming another weapon of the same archetype (Melee, Ranged, or Arcane).
- Permanently increase a shield's Defense by 1 by consuming another shield.
- Fuse a stackable Lunite Shard into another identical Lunite Shard, permanently increasing that shard's stacking effect.
- Permanently increase your maximum Surge Charge capacity by 1.
- Permanently increase a weapon's maximum Weapon Charges by 1.

The party may interact once with a dungeon's Moonwell Faeries.

FUSING LUNITE SHARDS

Heros may use Stardust to fuse duplicate stackable Lunite Shards together, permanently increasing that shard's stacking effect. This fused shard takes up 1 slot in a hero's backpack and Eventide Crest.

There are some limitations on which shards can be fused:

- (stacking): You can fuse an infinite number of these duplicate shards together. You can also equip another duplicate of the same shard (fused or unfused).
- (stacking x2): You can fuse up to 2 duplicates together. You cannot equip another duplicate of the same shard (fused or unfused).
- (non-stacking): You cannot fuse non-stacking Lunite Shards.

In all cases, an effect's chance can't exceed 6/6. For example, the Energizing Shard effect can have a maximum of 6/6 chance to bank a Surge Charge at the end of combat.

Example Play

After defeating the Source of Evil, the party decides to re-enter Mantora. The Archivist rolls on the Lore and Location tables. They decide to enter a Trials of the Deep dungeon, and the cartographer writes “Trials of the Deep” after the dungeon name on the dungeon sheet.

The party uses the Increased Enemy Level & Health table to find increased enemy stats. The highest level hero in the party is 14, so all enemies’ levels increase by +9, and all Behemoths’ health increases by +20. They indicate this on both the combat sheet and dungeon sheet.

The party plays through the Mantora dungeon using the Mantora tables, ensuring to activate enemy blunder abilities when their heroes’ attack or defense rolls are a natural 1 or 2.

At the end of their adventure, they roll on the room table and reveal the dungeon’s Final Room (no other possible room exits to explore). The Cartographer does not populate it with combat, altar, peril, etc. Instead, this room houses a Moonwell Faerie. The Cartographer indicates this with an F on the Dungeon Sheet.

The party enters the Final Room and each hero chooses to interact with the Faerie. Each hero rolls to receive d2 Stardust. All heroes have enough materials to improve their equipment, so they spend a moment to do so.

- Ash Loranth consumes 1 Stardust to fuse 2 Radiant Shards together, combining their effects in a single shard.
- Bernard “Tribbles” Tribulus consumes 1 Stardust and an arcane weapon to increase his main arcane weapon’s ATK by +1.
- Marthak consumes 1 Stardust and a shield to increase his favorite shield’s DEF by +1. He then consumes 1 more Stardust to increase his maximum Surge Charges to 6.
- Vassilica d’Estus consumes 1 Stardust to increase the maximum weapon charges on her Light-Blaze Crossbow by 1, to a total of 4 charges.

The party chooses to take the Final Room’s secret exit back to the entrance without backtracking. They return to Kara’s Vale to heal and level up.
